Episode Descriptions:
It's Sew Easy, Series 900

901 The Turn of the Century – 1900's

Vintage fashions still inspire today's designers. Rebecca Kemp Brent shows how to make an elegant lantern purse perfect for an evening out then and now. Kathy McMakin sews a precious turn-of-the-century child's day gown quickly and easily using today's serger techniques.

902 Doing More with Less - 1910-1919

Supplies were scarce during the First World War Fabric details replaced laces and trims. Londa Rohlfing shows how to create beautiful ruching for a contemporary blouse. Terry McNeely uses fabric and feathers to make a charming fascinator hat. Joanne Banko uses the cording foot to add extra flair to home decor.

903 – All That Jazz – the 1920's

As the 1920's roared in, women bared their shoulders and danced to the latest jazz. Angela Wolf creates a cutwork tank top using today's computer software and digital cutter. Amber Eden adds color and detail to a classic black sheath dress with silk flower embroidery.

904 – Fashionable Sleeves – Late 1920's

Sleeves became important as women spent more time outdoors and synthetic fabrics became popular. Angela Wolf shows how to change a pattern to add batwing sleeves. Then she shows how to create bishop sleeves, inspired by eastern European folk wear.

905 – The Glamorous 1930's

Hollywood designers and glamorous starlets set the trends as people flocked to the movies in the 1930's. Rebecca Kemp Brent shows how to recreate any neckline for a whole new look. Angela Wolf embroiders fabric to create a gown for the red carpet. Joanne Banko shows how to join lace, ribbon and fabric with the edge joining foot to get a designer look.

906- Feminine Fashions in Wartime – 1940's

During World War II, feminine fashion took on a more masculine look. But women added feminine touches. Joanne Banko creates embroidered lingerie. Then Heather Valentine shows how to top off boots with a lacey cuff. Joanne Banko adds beads and trims with the pearls and sequin foot.

907 – The 1950's Revisited

Figure-hugging, fitted bodices and full skirts defined 1950's fashion. Peggy Sagers adds French darts to a top for a perfect fit. Pearl Krush creates the iconic poodle skirt for an 18" fashion doll and Joanne Banko uses the couching and braiding feet to add style and color to a tote bag.

908 – Everything Comes Back – the 1950's

The 1950's look is all the rage today. Designer Courtney McCrone adds retro 50's details to dresses, blouses and accessories. Embroider a sweater to capture that rock 'n' roll look – Marie Zinno shows how. Joanne Banko shows how easy it is to create custom piping for garments, accessories and home décor using the piping foot.

909 – Up, Up and Around – the 1960's

Technology moved fast during the 1960's and everything from hemlines to rocket ships went up.

Angela Wolf turns modern art into wearable art as she makes a color-block mini-dress. Peggy Sagers shows how to design and make the comfortable and flattering wrap dress, a staple in every working woman's wardrobe.

910 – Fashion Free-for-All – the 1970's

Fashion rules went out the window in the 1970's. The t-shirt made the statement for day wear. Joanne Banko creates a custom embroidered t-shirt for a special cause. Jumpsuits were all the rage and are in again. Angela Wolf shows how to create a jumpsuit by combining existing pant and top patterns.

911 – Fashion on the Go – the 1980's

In the 1980's, designers took their cues from active wear, workout clothes and easy care fabrics. Angela Wolf adds a sassy peplum to a basic t-shirt to add swing and style. Cindy Hogan uses the latest digital cutting technology to create appliqués for a go-everywhere denim jacket.

912 – Brand Names – the 1990's

Fashion trends were being recycled. Casual chic and grunge were in, as long as the garments had the right designer label. Rebecca Kemp Brent creates a designer quilted tote bag with free motion stitching on a quilting frame. Londa Rohlfing gathers fabric with elastic thread to make an easy-to-wear peasant blouse. Joanne Banko uses bobbin work to create a hand-embroidered look on garments and accessories.

913 – The New Millennium – The 2000's

As the new century dawned, fashion had gone from corsets to spandex pants in just 100 years. Even dogs were getting dressed up. Paulette Bell creates a customized dog coat using machine embroidery. Angela Wolf adds a hand warmer to work-out wear for today's trendy touch.
